Selling from a Facebook Page

Setting up the Page, posts, orders by message, and building trust — Free preview

A Facebook Page is your shop's online address. A Page is better than running a business from a personal profile, because a Page lets you arrange the shop name, photos, address, and product list in one place.

Many small sellers post product photos on a Page, and customers order by message. With this method you can start selling even without a website.

What is it?

But posting alone does not bring sales. Customers want to know — how much does it cost, how will delivery work, and can this shop be trusted? Every part of the Page should answer those questions.

This guide shows you how to set up the Page, what to post, how to take orders by message, and how to build customer trust slowly and steadily.

How to start — a glimpse

1. Create a Facebook Page in your business name. Do not use a personal profile as the shop — arrange the shop's information on the Page.
2. Fill in the Page name, profile photo, cover photo, About section, contact number, and address. If the information is incomplete, customers become suspicious.
