Interview Preparation

Answers, behaviour and confidence — preparation step by step — Free preview

An interview is not an exam — it is a conversation, where the employer wants to know whether you can do the job, and you want to know whether the job is right for you. Preparation makes this conversation much easier.

Most questions are nothing new. Tell me about yourself, your strengths and weaknesses, why you want to work at this company — these come up in almost every interview. If you have thought about them beforehand, you will not get stuck.

What is it?

The structure of the answer is what matters. For experience questions the STAR method works — Situation, Task, Action, Result. Told like a short story, an answer is easier to remember.

This guide brings together the preparation steps, example answers to common questions, behaviour rules, and what to do after the interview. Do not memorise the examples — build your answers from your own true experience.

How to start — a glimpse

1. Learn about the company — what it does, whom it serves, and what this job involves.
2. Read the advertisement again and match it against your CV to see which of your experiences fit the role.
